Guest Lecture Report on Mr. Sumit Mundra's session

Topic: How to charter a successful corporate career?

On 28th November 2020, we had a guest lecture by Mr. Sumit Mundra, our distinguished alumnus of the batch 2000-02. He is currently working as the Director of Human Resources with Gartner for the commercial businesses in India. Mr. Mundra has amassed a vast experience of more than a decade and half years as a practitioner and advisor, working on wide-ranging topics related leadership, talent development, organization culture, change management and strategic communication.

In his session, Mr. Sumit explained how we can stand out in the crowd at work by increasing the QQ (Quirky Quotient), which can help us project ourselves as leaders and result oriented people. He also focused on being creative and inquisitive, which can help us learn new skills. We need to work upon our team building skills, as we generally need to work a lot in teams in our careers. This helps in problem solving and resolving conflicts with our colleagues as well. Mr. Mundra emphasised on the importance of self-realization & self-actualization. We work best when we mix our skills and be more productive. He also explained how a network map could help in building a strong network.

Mr. Mundra was happy to interact with the students and answered queries of students ranging from their personal life to their professional expectations. His answers were really practical derived from his personal experience that can help students in their long-term careers.
